2. Water quality and wastewater reclamation

- a. Are you now or have you been using reclaimed water from a wastewater treatment facility, desalination facility or water polluted by waste to a degree which unreasonably affects such water for other beneficial uses? YES _____ NO _____

The above discussion is provided for general information. For more specific information concerning water rights, please contact an attorney or write to this office. We have several pamphlets available. They include: (1) Statements of Water Division and Use, (2) Information Pertaining to Water Rights in California, and (3) Appropriation of Water in California.

Statements of Water Division and Use must be filed by riparian and per 1914 appropriate water users. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

An appropriate right is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised from the State.

A riparian right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of the served parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other users.

The same watershed as the riparian right to the served parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must never have been served from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the served parcel. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been served from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the served parcel.

An appropriate right is required for use of water source in California, riparian and appropriative rights. There are two principal types of surface water rights in California, riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on their riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other riparian users. GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and never have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.
